Coaching for Success: What Every Leader Needs to Know About Leading Their Team to Excellence

The way we work is being redefined by a multi-generational workforce, virtual technologies and global communications. It is now time to develop the mindset, behaviors and strategies that will ensure success over the long-term. This session explains the difference between management, leadership and coaching, and illustrates how a manager's style can influence the development and performance level of employees. When a manager is able to assess the competency of employees, and understand what truly motivates them, they will then be able to effectively engage in the appropriate coaching style, which will ensure positive performance.
